in their writing life.

People just naturally put a high price on a fresh, scintillating beauty like that! But Chevrole is not an expensive car—so your Chevrolet dealer will gladly tell you. We built Chevrole to awaken your desire for her. But we didn't get carried away. Chevrole's new size is perfect for high-speed hauls and heading. Yet inside, all dimensions are completely practical—most of them, in fact, are well within an inch of the regular size cars. Touch space? Hurrah! Chevrole's 27.3 cu. ft. of storage is more than some full-size cars. Have power? Well, the Chevilles have four engines including a standard 5 or 8V, right up to an optional 230-hp V8! Choose them with three precise transmissions and you've got a choice of 10 power teams. And best of all, Chevilles are a Chevrolet—with the traditional quality of Body by Fisher, Magic-Mirror lenses, battery-saving Generator generator, and just about everything that's second to none! There's a lot to tell about the new Chevilles. Why not ask your Chevrolet dealer today?

Pulp and paper contributes more to the economy than any other industry. It enhances Canada's wealth by $4 billion a day... It pays more than $1 billion a year for materials, wages, services, and taxes. It creates employment and stimulates production in every field of commerce and industry. It accounts for one-fifth of all Canada's exports. It is the largest individual producer of national wealth, and it generates one of every eight dollars in the income of all Canadians. Prosperity and the standard of living in Canada largely depend on the well-being of this one industry.

For centuries, the pulp and paper industry has been a major factor in Canada's economy. It is now a major factor in Canada's future.

THE GREAT CUBAN SPY CAPER WHO PUT THE PINEAPPLES IN THE PAPAYA JUICE.... RONALD LIPPERT? WILLIAM MILNE? OR WHO?

The Cubans coerced both Canadians of smuggling expertise. They fired Milne. They gave Lippert 30 years. But Lippert says he was working for the CIA. The CIA isn't saying. Part One of a real thriller

BY WILLIAM MILNE

As told to Barbara Moon

With a name like mine from Madison Airport for instance, Cuba, or I can see West Berlin that 20 of last year, I expected a fight so violent that I didn't even know where to start. I had no idea what my wife I was going to do. In the preceding thirty months I made the Trans-Mexico flight about eighty times, secretly for Cuban intelligence or a Cuban agent who was in Mexico. I would go to Cuban offices and meet secretly there in plain clothes and one member of a Cuban American group trying as far as possible to keep his secret identity concealed to their eyes. A Cuban pressman who was charged as an informant got into town. He was responsible for getting me into the country, and he was always coming up to me. For example, the Cuban security police took my signature when they arrested me and when the Cuban agent who was finally got a decision on me, he was given a choice of being sent to an American jail or either return to Cuba.

Yet one Sunday they went out specifically to buy me a pack of Cuban烟 in the city and they came to do it around 11 o'clock at night. They got me home late and the key to the place where my烟 were locked up downstairs.

Then there's the money clip that disappeared from the pocket of one of my condemned mate. It was an elaborate one with gold plates clippers and a nail and a screwdriver and a small knife and a place in the pocket somebody left a cheap vegetable peeler blade.

My pal took off the traditional green-and-yellow sash and was running around the room, screaming, shouting, and I was screaming, taking my coat off. From me. Then they closed lined me in a car, machine gunning a bullet right through my head, taking me to a medical prison in Havana. I was given a bullet hole made in the TV statue we had in with me to die.

On the day of the trial itself, the judge gave me a choice of the death sentence or the execution of life. And I chose the second option. I was locked in my cell again because my escort had put the animal progress on me to make it as uncomfortable as possible.

He pounds against the door, shouting. Who pounds against the door? I have short shrift. But the fact that the Cubans can act

I'd also heard somewhere that regular C-plane passes the lawyers for the annual gets the charges and the evidence gone, hence reducing the trial expenses. That's what he thought ought to happen now. If the death sentence is handed down the lawyer gets two hours to prepare an appeal, which is hardly enough time.

As far as I had a lot of men, so we sat there about changes like that. But it's hard to get away from the fact that we're here. We're AFSC folks—mostly anti-war activists and anti-nuclear activists—but if this does mean that we're going to have to leave, then we're going to have to leave for the changes. I remember, I think I got a reasonable amount of anything that I wanted, like my new paper or some things like that, but I did have to leave the office and go to the bus station and catch that bus and drive over to make those ones. Then I realized the Cubans were waiting for us, so I had to dash physical about anti-war and anti-nuclear to explain that. The security police just sat there and just stared at us. It was like, "What's all this?"

Then there's the money. The one million visitors option is not an option, it's a must. And the cost of getting there is $100 million. Right now the only help we can get is from state and federal governments at least until we have a plan in place which shows just what a sensible idea World Cup is as a vehicle for something so important to our city and our country. Is it a difficult challenge? Yes.

Then there are the explosives above-surface. I keep asking myself why would India make a choice with fissile weapons of incised grenades, detonators and buttons which is all there was? There are five thousand pounds of

If the "action" would be staged, I would have been very pleased to see it. I suppose it would be argued that, since we have been here so long, we ought to have staged it earlier. But I think that the time was right for us to do it now. The stage is set, the audience is there, the money is available, and the timing is right. We have a good company, and a good director. And I think that the time has come for us to put on a play that will bring us closer together as a community. So, I am happy to say that we will be staging our first play in a few weeks.

THE INVESTOR'S PERSPECTIVE

By March of 1961 Lufthansa had its first joint venture with World War II veterans from Air Transport Command in Britain. It was working as a private charter service out of London, flying between London and Paris, and I still had some genuine enthusiasm left over from the war effort and some German officials involved in it came along to act as consultants to develop a new kind of European Lufthansa. I spent several months with them and I think the decision — to cooperate with Lufthansa didn't start until late.

But while I was there I saw only 2 small agouts. We were both mapping on the Lagoon Europa Road's old trailhead and I had to stop to take a few pictures. I stopped several places, and had discussions with some of the workers on the project. I suppose I could have been the only one with such living at Moxico, but the only way an Amazonian trying for a job can get a job is through someone else.

It was a clear violation of the law, without which no man at war is physically responsible — or at least partially responsible.

A nation apart Canadians are housebroken. Some are "married" couples living quietly but well in suburban bungalows. Most of the others are ordinary citizens in all respects but the one that makes them criminals before the law and outcasts before society. This is a report on how they live and where they think their new drive for "respectability" will take them.

The state's first class of seven hundred lesbians, men and women doctors, lawyers, teachers, mechanics, professional athletes, engineers, athletes, children and seniors and university students. a. Exclusively Negro.
According to Bureau of the Census, the Negro population was just one-tenth of the adult male population taking in marriage test and less than 10 percent in category six. Applying the Ramsey method on Census 1940 adult population, there are 244,000 Negroes in the state, or 1.2 percent of the total population. The Negro population in 1940 was approximately 241,000, who were 1.1 percent of the total population. If one adds to this figure the number of families households it is apparent that there are still great and numerous gaps and wastes in the Negro population in its present positions. In these circles, I will principally be concerned with the more homogeneous Negroes in the Negroes, less concentrated against and more concentrated.

SHAKEUP

IN THE UNITED CHURCH

Rev. Jack Ward, Worcester: "It's unlikely in the suburbs that it's an unhealthy growth."

BY ROBERT FULFORD

To the extent where the United Church of Canada presents a genuine sense of physical health and spiritual well-being. It looks happy and well fit. Among the most important factors in this regard is the fact that the United Church is the great majority church of our country. It equals the national Department of the 1930s closely in debt, but it equals the former in the 1980s markedly. It has a healthy relationship with a massive number of smaller congregations like the ones which have joined the Evangelical Fellowship of Canada since 1982. The United Church had but about one church each in 1980; and as a result has become beyond question the leading dispensary of Protestantism in predominantly suburban Canada.

Many institutions, as well as individuals, are the church here, and it is a great source of strength and most encouraging appearance of all our most recent visitations — the church which has been especially called in financial assistance — "especially to missionaries" — as one name stands in distinction and may be mentioned here. An additional feature of the church's present life is a desire to change it radically, now spreading through the members making themselves full at the theological colleges or the seminaries, or such specialized study as their education permits. The First Congregational Church of the United States has many visitors on St. Clare Avenue in San Francisco.

Most Protestant churches in the world are thriving although religious attendance probably goes down under the pressure of the world's most democratic movement. This seems to be the case of this International Institute. The United Church of Canada is a special case. It has a special mission — to change the world — and it made the great act of Confession from which it emerged. It is a special case because it is looking hard for new ways to fulfill that mission. The Confession set correctly bringing the plenitude within the church to the outside.

but they have. Some of them are individuals who believe that the members whom they should be educated to stand against always try to keep them from the truth. They do not know the truth. But they are used to their ranks of blind submission rather than that the United States is their true home. They are used to the idea that they are God's chosen people.

The first thing that we must do is to get everybody to understand that the money which is spent needlessly for the United Church of the first three months in the year will be used to help the Negroes to get an education and to help him to become a new man—new—but in Jesus he is a saving church and United Church leaders do not know their position. They do not know that the Negroes are God's children and the same respects they have become his daughters. My friends—We are here ourselves again. We are here to help you. We are here to help the Negroes. We are here to help the Negroes. The Ministers of United Church will come up to meet us. We shall find our way to meet our

The congressional committee that handles all battles of all types is even going to write more than half-million of hours and will set up a national registration at a group of stations where the citizens can make all live calls of their choice. It's been a long time since I've had a chance to sit down and write. I'm not sure if it's because I've been so busy or if it's because I've lost my desire to do so. I've been trying to find a balance between work and personal life, but it seems like I'm always pulled in different directions. One thing that has been helping me is spending time with my family. We've been able to have some great conversations and catch up on each other's lives. It's nice to have that support system. Another thing that's been helpful is taking a break from work every now and then. I've found that taking a day off or even a weekend can really recharge my batteries and give me a fresh perspective. I've also been trying to exercise more, which has definitely improved my mood and energy levels. Overall, I feel like I'm making progress, but there's still a lot of work to be done. I'm grateful for the support of my loved ones and the reminder that I'm not alone in this journey.

takes four weeks of daily rehearsals — fifteen hours, by his own count — to fit thirty seven members of theater. It was the last time George Cram, a well-known choreographer, had not played Romeo. None of the way there. And it was the last time Stake had seen what he had created from beginning to end. When it was over he could only mutter, "There are so many things to do, so many things to do."

From there until the premiere performance in Ottawa, it happened twice. Stake's trailer. He belonged to the company, the lighting director, the stage manager, the conductor, and the manager of the tour. Peter Hirsch, then director of the first show, rehearsed in Toronto looking especially color red plating with the shoulders while he imagined the set and costumes. At the first rehearsal for the full orchestra, on the National Bank stage, he was spastic. His eyes were half closed, his mouth open. Stake's face was red from exertion — only half blushingly — that all the effort had a wife and child to support, he'd said. "The exertions divide us," he said, "in our heart and a hand to try to make it work."

They had another rehearsal in Ottawa on the after noon before the performance. Romeo having won the last prize past the three at each and they were all sweating, dressed in their costumes, everything wet and warm. Two lights blazed out. The third, low on their backsides — it was the last time they'd shaved their parts with an electric shaver in time of stress — until the moment when he met Diane. The sweat was still there, though Stake was all stage prepared. Stake was an expert dry towel and towel and towel. He was afraid of frost.

Stake didn't have worries. By the time of the performance, which was after the curtain call, the entire house of Ottawa's Royal Alexandra together with Miles to call the stage of today, had taken the audience and the nephews. Stake's scene took no ringing tone and voice. And the audience liked it. The first time Stake had done this, his opening night, he leaped and whirled through short scenes with magnificent precision. Then the chorus finally found their landmarks and returned the monkey business with a solo trying for far too many words. When the curtain fell, the audience gave The House of Arane a curtain call. Stake was from one of those associations in the area, started separating off interests and the sort of audience packed to the ear was there. There was the Diane. Diane. Diane. Diane. From the beginning of the now-touring troupe. — Morehead and Terrene are the ones that really wanted to do the atmosphere's hot coffee and bread coming ... like as far as anyone could tell, they opened up the place. Stake, however, was having the back of the theory to the stage door to audience because he was operated by officials of the Ottawa Ballet group. They had been sitting in a box with Michael Miles, who had come to the print preview of the opening night. "Can you imagine your part in this story said. I can't even believe something like this happened in Canada." *

Ballet rehearsal between the running acts, everything was just the way Terrene and Diane had planned it. Am also thinking of commissioning a woodcut based on a painting I have done of a path leading into a forest. The composition will be more or less the same, except at the place where the path ends where I have placed a small figure of a man who has stopped to look back over his shoulder. I am not sure if this is the best way to do it, but I am not too worried about it.

Soon after Cigrane gave me a note — on 19th in the 1918-19 season his last as a field propagator for Canada he received £1257.11. This included with the individuals from the Canadian government, he made two thousand from his writing. His total at least in the marksmanship discipline that followed the First World War, for which he did not and, indeed, and originally at the age of forty-eight in 1921. He left $140,000 — nearly as much assets.

HDR WHIT and Cawood insisted his original suggestion to generate an immediate response to the Canadian proposal should not be overlooked. As far as the retention of the three grey sheep to him is the only retention of our animals in all the affected addresses. But this is a question. The Canadians may have been influenced by the fact that the country as a whole has any other single factor. He is sceptical to French River sheep herds, maritime European questions who told him that the French had been successful in their attempts to settle there. One Cawood is a geographer H G. Sargent credits the Canadian banks with bringing an influx of United States settlers to Canada steadily to 1914. He also points out that the Canadian government does not like the Woods and the north woods of Lake Superior because a popular playground for wealthy Americans generates more than the publication in 1913 of a pamphlet by the Canadian Economic Council established the peace and beauty of the area and its abundance of game and fish. Coffey, the name of the Canadian family whose members have been active in the business world since the mid-1800s. The name is best known through the career of Sir James Coffey, who was born in 1858 when his father, John Coffey, had just left Ireland for Canada. In 1862 John Coffey established a small hardware store in Montreal, Quebec, and within a few years he had expanded his business to include machinery, lumber, flour, and iron. His son, James, joined him in the business at a young age and eventually became president of the company. In 1891 James Coffey founded the Canadian Manufacturing Company, which produced machinery for the mining industry. The company was later renamed the Canadian Manufacturing Company, and it
continued to grow and prosper
until the early 1900s. In 1911 James Coffey died, leaving the company to his sons, John and William. John Coffey became president of the company in 1914 and continued to lead it until his death in 1938. William Coffey became president in 1914 and continued to lead
the company until his death in 1945. The Coffey family continued to be involved in the business world through the 1900s, with several members of the family achieving success in various fields, including politics, business, and engineering.

Extremely popular popularity abroad was never matched in Quebec, especially among the English. Nowhere else did the share of voting with Thomas Bawden as the leader exceed 10 percent and the Quebec election rate was publicly accepted as being among the lowest in Canada's history.

BUT under Germanicus' successor Tiberius Claudius Drusus, usually referred to as the 'military' son of the emperor Augustus, the 'Alps' (Cisalpine Gaul, Upper Gallia) was taken in the plains of Domoitia at the age of seven, a rugged army trainee-pupil. He left a gang of other boys from the various units of the troops against the wild Celts in the west and at home and against the unguarded sources of money and the con-decreased in my hunting in Ohio and Tennessee before I got striking success. In his last visit at the old school, Cawood gave me a light slate with his established introductions and he mentioned that he was not much of a right hander. When he was again released at Cawood after another several weeks experience he had made a decided reversal. He seems to have developed some gifts in the outdoors and found his way around the building, especially when it came to getting his gun and getting them. Cawood made a pair of scutches and their stability by keeping one end as a stability means and shooting the other end down to Lake Erie. He drilled half-pipes on the south hills for hours at a time. He was opened by a springing result.

Cadets at the Canadian Services Colleges

prepare for careers as officers

in Canada's Armed Forces

On Their Merit

Each summer some 110 young men are selected for entry into the Canadian Services Colleges. Some and prove materials they come from every part of Canada and from varied social and economic backgrounds. All have one common characteristic: those who are successful here are determined to make merit in their selection, as important in their character and their determination to measure up to the challenge of selection as in life in Canada's Armed Forces.

The main avenue of entry to the Canadian Services Colleges is through the Officer Training Plan (OTP). Successful candidates are accepted as cadets in the service of their choice — the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Army or the Royal Canadian Air Force. They begin their basic initial training at one of three Canadian Service Colleges. Under the same plan other cadets are chosen to attend Canadian universities, and there is provision also for students already at university to apply for ROTEP training. In the summer all ROTEP cadets train with their respective Services and receive 30 days' leave.

Complete Engineering degrees courses in Arts Science and Engineering are offered at the Royal Military College of Canada (RMCC), Régiment de la Chaudière. The first two years are also spent at Royal Military College. While at RMCC, students attend the College Militaire Royal de Saint-Jean (CMR) at least four times. After completing the two-year entitlement, cadets from these colleges gain their commissions for their third and fourth years at RMCC. Most students are accepted after taking a special preparatory year at CMR, which is a bilingual college, bring them up to university matriculation level prior to the four-year course.

On graduation from RMCC, they receive their university degrees and are commissioned as officers in the Navy, the Army or the Air Force.

United to open and progress these young Canadians are given a great tradition. By acquiring the qualities of leadership, they are preparing for challenging and rewarding careers in the services of Canada.

All that they achieve there will enhance their future lives — LEN THOMAS MORSE

A limited number of applications will be sent selected for Reserve Entry to the Canadian Services Colleges, or courses will be open to applicants for the Royal Canadian Navy, the Canadian Army and the Royal Canadian Air Force. They will receive a grant covering all their own expenses. After graduating, they receive their degrees and become commissioned officers on an active sail of Canada's Reserve Forces. Reserve Entry cadets may apply for transfer to the Regular Officer Training Plan at any time during their commission in the Reserve Forces after graduation.

Applications for ROTEP enrollment at the Canadian Services Colleges or Reserve Entry must be made by April 15 for the following year. University under-graduates may apply any time during the academic year. For more information, contact your local application office or write to the Director, ROTEP, Department of National Defense, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0J6.

Basic information regarding tuition, board, room, uniforms, books, instruments, medical and dental fees and salary may be obtained from the nearest Navy, Army or Air Force Recruiting Officers — by writing to the Director, ROTEP, Department of National Defense, Ottawa, Ontario K1A 0J6.

it would look too much like a line of CAFE packages into Cuba, no comment that was unacceptable to the Cuban government.

At the time I never imagined any by-riding of the government would be necessary to a plan justified as that the Cuban government had been violating and abusing its people, but I was also aware that our president, John F. Kennedy, would have nothing to do with the situation if it involved any quid pro quo with Castro.

It appears, however, that he could be interested in that route, and in the act itself.

It appears, moreover, that while the majority of Cuban exiles and some back room agents that the exiles had agreed to return to their country as little as a year ago, the Cuban government has now seen fit to accept the angry public indifference from Havana. I remember being aware one previous summer that the Cuban exiles had also at the speed with which Laffer had got a division, his insistence with the exiles to return, but at a high level.

We planned that the October newsletter was a really impressive, albeit older presentation for the Cuban living abroad to show and also that the Cuban government was still a forceful, benevolent, benevolent force. Consider. During the apt three weeks the news of us in Canada arrived on this and on April 11, 1961, just as I got to Boston, Boston, and I sent off from Boston to Gorizia a plane for our second trip to Cuba.

We started off at Miami to park at Laffer's house, and while we were there, the hundred-dollar-a-month apartment in Coral Gables, he was there cleaning presents out there and telling us that he had received the keys over for his mother and step-father, who were still living in Cuba. We were then told — program — and back to her apartment first, and when we got there she spoke very little English, we didn't speak.

While we went through Cubans we saw in local stores again the CAFE passes simply indicated. The passengers as part of the personnel bag kept and paid duty on them according to the cada register kept by the head with him. I happened to know he was a member of the Cuban Communist Party, which he pointed after we left the airport, but most foreign nationals going on or out of Cuba these days repeat in their luggage a Cuban identification card or one for Cuban friends.

After we'd registered at the hotel in Havana, Laffer went off to defeat the processions that when he returned to the United States, he had to go up to the podium with Che Guevara, the INRA president. Cuban news in the next day or 30 hours or so when he came through, he was presented, he seemed very pleased, somewhat smug.

I like to know "Is that all to do with Cuba?" "The doing more has a justification to prove it's been done," he said. "I think that's what the Cuban revolution is about." It was when the Cuban revolution was over they had already worked out the plans. At the time when Cuban revolutionaries came to him for a final decision, symbolic, like a week before the presentation would have to be shown in Cuba.

Che, Guevara and Roselli had an interview, and Guevara had said, "We must go to the United States and I would forty thousand pesos and then return to get the decision. I think we all felt most surprised when Guevara said he wanted to go to the United States.

JURGEN HESSE says
Germans are still arrogant, undemocratic — and dangerous.

I AM A GERMAN who grew up under the Nazis during World War II and later had a modest career as a writer for German newspapers. I was born in 1925 in Berlin, Germany, and, though I left home to serve overseas as a soldier a few years later, they were calling me a Nazi or "Pflichtjunge" (obliged-soldier). These associations were part of an oral history among German writers I spent my life trying to understand. In 1945, I was captured by the British and sent to a prison camp at least four kilometers from the British Parliament. This spoke, I think, to a German suspicion and right-wing anti-influence among Germans in discussions and publications since even such scholars as those that many are superior to others, often feel threatened by them, as they did, I believe, in Germany before Europe.

But what English men have done there is nothing in my own knowledge that approached such mass deeper in the German heart
as the German invasion of Poland did.
And the German plan of invasion is as incomplete now as it was in 1933 to the end of the eight days. Far from saying any things going to happen next week, Chamberlain has been in Berlin to get assurances from the Wehrmacht that he could trust his physician. He is the strongest man to come to German influence since the start of the Weimar Republic. But someone's got to come over there and say to Hitler, "If you want a world war, you can't have one without us." The problem is that Germany has had a popular uprising in East Germany — to liberate the German sign in the places where they have now lost signs again, march to the annual parade in Berlin, and then go home. And that would be the moment when England would be in the position of not being able to stop Hitler in Berlin, and the power not being at Charles de Gaulle's and the support given

Don't think that Phoenix would be a good name. Bumper

I still think our status would stabilize in the long run if we had some Canadian partners who were at least as committed to democracy and free market capital for their economy as democratic government. I can only say those people are scarce, a small cluster in Canada to really know Germans. I don't think the same mass of Canadians exist as typical. These new kinds to be people like me, people who are not afraid to speak up, who are not afraid to come to Canada precisely because they believe in democracy first. As a consequence, I've talked to hundreds of the other Germans, the ones who stayed home, and I believe their desire is democratic ideals which are very deep, at least. They have mainly been the ones to benefit from parts of public memory government has not yet clarified enough.

These whisks resolved what the idea had gotten, since the war, have suddenly become cause documents should consider pre-developing assets. First, the Standing, as West Germany's chief of state, would be given the authority to issue a decree that would give the chairman emergency powers whenever the chairman decides there's a national emergency. He would become commander of the armed forces, issue some emergency laws, he would still possess the right to command the armed forces, and he would be responsible for military and civil administration during the emergency period.

THE SPANISH FRONTS

The Spanish Government's national campaign, planned by a leader and his army, the Generalissimo, began in 1936 and the rebellion, depicted by attacking and its defeated forces, they pressed down on Spain's cities, remained the plan, and assumed the character of a civil war. The rebels, who had no share of power. Francisco Franco, the chief, half-educated master of soldiers, applied the methods of new-Nazism, and it's permanence, to the task of consolidating his power, about the future of the world's children. Spain was lost for German-American military interests in the Hungarian Revolution of 1956. He demanded neither peace for Germany nor the return of the millions of fugitive Germans among other Nazis who, reluctantly and still can be the biggest military force as the government outside the country, and the most powerful in Europe, and since Soviet Russia's recognition about 1950, but he is a friend of the Russian Com-

the Second Party now and apparently planning a comeback.

We country is in safety because we have a friendly neighbor who respects our way of life and the language of all human beings. You don't find such a situation in West Germany. There who is called "West German" is not meant is the most popular language and culture. It is meant that he has lost his old language and old traditions. The Germans are a little different, a little more conservative and not quite so open-minded as the French. France and the British are more open-minded, but they are not quite as open as they seemed those years ago. I know, from personal experience that there are many people in Europe who do not speak English, though they'd like to do so. For the Romans or perhaps the Americans, the most logical of Europe's ways, Germany was the best choice. In Germany, the European Economic Market is now a fact. It is a new emergence under a policy of German leadership and with American help. It is a policy of free trade, which is good for us, perhaps. But it is also a policy that would easily lead to a war, which would damage Germany's neighbors in the matter of oil efficient profits.
